Addressing the Greatest Needs of Children

As the Life Transformation Platform continues to be established and implemented around the world, we are filled with gratitude for the impact you have already made to make this groundbreaking work possible.

Our Frontline Church Partners have always had a powerful perspective into the needs of their communities, and they are perfectly positioned to do something about those needs. But this initiative is equipping these ministry partners with capabilities to make a difference like never before, providing data and tools to identify the core roadblocks to child transformation and match them with the best solutions possible.

For example, some churches in El Salvador who recently went through the data collection process have been able to trace many challenges facing children back to a straightforward cause: numeracy, the ability to understand and work with numbers. With this knowledge in hand, these churches are now adopting curriculum designed to provide students with an effective grounding in mathematics in their early primary school years. Not only will this help children develop self-confidence and enable them to make sense of numbers, patterns, and shapes, but it will also have ripple effects that help them achieve a lifetime of better outcomes.

Similar stories of awareness and action are happening all around the world as this initiative unfolds. And thanks to your generous support, more and more churches are gaining access to the Life Transformation Platform each day!

Testimonies of Impact from Kenya

As the Life Transformation Platform has recently been implemented in Erupata, Kenya, five key opportunities emerged to maximize the impact of frontline churches on children in their neighborhoods: water solutions, food security, healthcare access, school infrastructure, and parent education on the harms of female genital mutilation (FGM). Several local leaders shared what that process has meant to them and their ministry to children:

Reverend Samuel, local pastor in Erupata

“Through this process, we were able to discover ourselves and the priority problems within the community that we are in. What are the intervention measures that we can come up with to help us solve the problems? And not just this, but we were able to discover the resources that are around us and the many talents within the people we have.

“We now have a community with a shared vision. It’s not just a vision from me as the pastor, but it’s a shared vision of the entire community. This is the journey we are embarking on. And every time we meet, we ask: ‘Do you still remember our five priority areas? What are we doing about it? How far have we come?’ I see a lot of hope in this community, and my prayer is that the process continues.”

Josephine, project director in Erupata

“The Life Transformation Platform process has had a big impact for me. Because now as I approach a child, I know the challenges the child is facing. Children have a lot to say about the problems they’re facing in the community, and sometimes we overlook their problems. So it has encouraged me to be very close to these children so they can get the best from the program.

I also didn’t know that most of the problems that we have in our communities can be solved with everything that we have. For example, Compassion assisted us, and now we have clean water. But now we also know that through this water we can do things we never imagined. Families can come up with small kitchen gardens, and we can grow drought-resistant crops. We are going to make sure that food shortage won’t be a problem again here in Erupata like before.

My vision is widened, and I realized that no problem is permanent. No problem is impossible to solve.”
